NECESSARY FOR HIM TO DIE.

THE MISSION OF JESUS IMPRESSED ON APOSTLES BY HIS DEATH.

He Desired Them to Know That He Came for a Spiritual Purpose-Method Involved Suffering, Death and Resurrection.

Bunday school lesson for April 10. SUFFER-INGS OF JESUS FORETOLD. Matt. xvi:21-25. By J. E. Gilbert, D. D., LL. D., Secretary of American Society of Reli-gious Education. CONTEXT. Our last lesson covered events connected with the tenth journey which Jesus made in Galilee, Capernaum being the point of departure and return. To-day we are in His eleventh circuit, supposed to be in the autumn of the year 29. The intervening history is full of interest. The feeding of the four thousand, the journey to Magdala, the encounter with the Phar-isees and Sadducees, who sought a sign the warning against the false doctrine of the Pharisees, the healing of a blind man the testimony of Peter to the Messiahship of Christ, the remarks of Jesus concerning the founding of His church—these were the chief incidents, all deserving careful study. Our present lesson, recorded also in Markand Luke, but most circumstantial in Matthew, finds Jesus and the apostles in the region of Caesarea Philippi, the extreme northern part of the land, a mountainous region, probably fifty miles from home. He was still in the unpopular period of His ministry, shunning the multifudes because they did not appreciate Him, and because He desired privacy in order to instruct His disciples. the testimony of Peter to the Messiahship

He desired privacy in order to instruct His disciples.

FORECAST. Jesus deemed it important to begin at this time a disclosure of His future. The apostles, while they accepted His divinity and believed in Him as the one foretold in Scripture (Matt. xvi:16), did not understand His mission. They looked for a temporal kingdom with Him at its head and with them in important stations (Mark x:37). He desired them to know that He came for a spiritual purpose to be achieved by a method entirely different from that which they had expected. That method involved suffering, death and resurrection. For that purpose He must go up to Jerusalem. He must die there, and die at the hands of the chief priests and secribes. This was necessary because it had been predetermined and predicted (Isalah (Illi:7). As the Lamb was slain to make atonement for the sins of the people so must He, as the lamb of God, be sacrificed (John 1:29). It was not to be expected that this thought would be immediately received. Hence He began at this time, as our lesson says (verse 21), to unfold it, and continued from time to time thereafter (Matt. xx:18) to make reference to it, and to enforce it (Mark ix:31).

REBUKE. As might be expected, the apostles were not prepared for such announcement. It may be that they thought our Lord looked gloomily upon the situation. The impulsive Peter doubtless voiced the sentiment of all when he said: "Be it far from Thee, Lord" (verse 22). What lay behind these words no one knows. Did he think of His power, as of one abundantly able to defend Himself against all enemies? Or, did he think of His power, as of one abundantly able to defend Himself against all enemies? Or, did he think of His power, as of one abundant He would assert Himself and subdue all adversaries and ascend the throne of David (Fsalm ii:9)? Whatever consideration may have influenced the apostle, it is cvident that he assumed an earnest manner. He took Jesus, probably drew Him FORECAST. Jesus deemed it important to begin at this time a disclosure of His adversaries and ascend the throne of David (Psalm ii:9)? Whatever consideration may have influenced the apostle, it is cyident that he assumed an earnest manner. He took Jesus, probably drew Him eside, remonstrated with Him, disapproved of the statement, and declared that nothing of the sort could occur. It is fair to assume that he was sincere in this matter, for otherwise he would never have presumed to contradict his Master.

REPROOF. The reply of Jesus to Peter's remarks was deservedly severe (verse 23). It was important to make the man know his place, especially after the previous commendation (Matt. xvi:17-i8). It was also necessary to maintain Christ's first statement. There were four points in the reproof: First, Jesus ordered Peter to get behind Him, to take the place of a learner, for all teachers were followed by their disciples (Matt. tv:19); second, He called him satan, meaning not the chief spirit of the evil world (Job. 1:6), but an adversary (II. Sam. xix:22), one who opposes; third, He declared that Peter was an offense to Him, that his statement was calculated to defeat the purpose of our Lord; fourth, He said that Peter was not moved by heavenly and divine, but by earthly and human, considerations, that he spoke without a knowledge of God's purpose and plan. These four noints show that the apostic was on a low plane, that he did not comprehend the Gospel. His mind had not yet been sufficiently illuminated. He is a fair sample of a large class of men, who, in every age, attempt to construct systems of thought and to institute measures that are out of harmony with the methods or-every age, attempt to construct systems of thought and to institute measures that are out of harmony with the methods ordained by infinite wisdom.

DISCIPLESHIP. This teaching of Jesus concerning Himself, reaffirmed to Peter, was calculated to repei the little band chosen to represent His cause. Strange thoughts must have entered their minds concerning their raises and week. band chosen to represent HIs cause. Strange thoughts must have entered their minds concerning their place and work. What can they do, why should they follow, if Jesus is to be put to death? Perhaps Jesus discerned or anticipated such reflections. At least He answers the queries by showing that the men must share His fate. They must deny themselves, take up their cross and follow Him. (verse 24). If they attempted to save their lives they would lose them (verse 25). This He had previously said (Matt. x.38-39). So important was it that He repeated it (Luke xiv.26-27) more than once (John xii:25-28). He is putting forth the high law of His kingdom, hard then to receive, but destined to be elevated into a doctrine (II Tim. iii:12) and proclaimed in distant parts (I Cor. xv.33), the law of self-sacrifice. That law was directly opposed then, as it is now, to the popular conception of life, as a period of self-secking, of gain and pleasure (II Tim. iii:3).

solt-seeking, of gain and pleasure (II Tim. iii.ia).

BARTER. A measureless guif yawned between Jesus and His disciples, when these last words were uttered. He had declared what to them was not only a mystery, but also a hopeless representation of the cause to which they had committed themselves. He destined to die by cruel hands. They destined to follow on and lay down their lives for His sake. To complete the absurdity this is declared to be the way to His glory and to their salvation. To bridge over the difficulty and regain His control Jesus advances to the subject of personal profit. Suppose, instead of what He predicted, they could gain the whole world (of course impossible), what profit if they lose their souls? (Verse 25.) In this He endeavored to bring their minds to consider the relative value of temporal and heavenly things, that they might make choice. (Heb. xi.25.) How can any man barter away his soul for any earthly good? To some extent by this question Jesus conveyed to the disciples a slight idea of His mission as Messiah, and their relation to Him (Rev. H.190), as well as the reward at His coming. (Matt. xxv.35).

REWARD. Human nature is so constituted that a man cannot commit himself to any measure unless there is some hope of personal gain. It was therefore necessary for Jesus in dealing with the untrained band of fishermen disciples to show that their following was not to result in a total loss. Shortly after they raised the quesof personal gain. It was therefore necessary for Jesus in dealing with the untrained band of fishermen disciples to show that their following was not to result in a total loss. Shortly after they raised the question (Mark x.28) and it was proper for Him now that He had spoken of the cross to assure them of a reward (verse 27). This He does in unmistakable terms, the same terms as are frequently used in the Old Testament (Proverbs xxiv:12), and in the New Testament (Roman xiv:12). But that reward is placed in the future, by most commentators supposed to be at the end of this dispensation (Revelation i.3) but by some, at the death of each believer (John xiv:3). The expressions, "the glory of His Father," and "with His angels," seem to indicate a general event of most imposing and phenomenal interest, as of the great judgment (Daniel vii:10). The spostles appear to have had that view (II, Thess. 1:3) which has had a widespread influence in the church, Gude 14).

KINGDOM, There was good logic in all that Jesus had said up to this point, He, the Messiah, must suffer, die, and rise again. His followers must, in like manner, be sacrificed for Him. But they shall not lose their reward in His kingdom, We can put these propositions together and find comfort, more than tongue can express. That little company to which the words were first spoken must have had some confusion of ideas requiring further instruction. When will that kingdom be set up and how? The question may have been asked, or it may have struggled in burdened hearts that dared not utter their fears. How that question, has disturbed the church! How many words of Scripture have been distorted and how many in all centuries have sheen mansled to confirm preconceived opinions. How many in all centuries have sheen mansled to confirm preconceived opinions. How many in all centuries have stood a tin-toe, gazing and expecting (Luke xvii:29). The Master gaze and 28). Some there present should live to see the setting up of the kingdom (15hn xxi:22-23). That statement w would lay down His life and take it again. (John x:17.) He would become victorious by first suffering defeat. He would invite men to Him in the same spirit, and bid them triumph as He did, gaining their lives by sacrificing them. Of such, and such only (Romans vili:9). He would establish a kingdom, the beginning of which should be made in the lifetime of those who were about Him, a kingdom which should never end (Daniel iv:3), in which innumerable blessings should be granted to its faithful subjects. Such a statement might seem to worldly-wise men but the mad utterances of one bereft of reason. And yet the kingdom has come. The king is won His throne (Psalm ii:5). He counts His people by hundreds of millions. They are loyal beyond the most abject servants of the mightiest potentates of earth. That kingdom spreads. To Him shall "every tongue confess" (Phil. ii:11).

FOR CONFEDERATE MONUMENT

Monument Committee of the State Association Decides to Raise $10,000.

Sedalia, Mo., April 8.-(Special.) The monument committee of the United Confederate Veterans' Association, of Mis-souri, consisting of Judge Leroy B. Valliant, St. Louis; George N. Ratliff, Mo-berly; A. L. Zollinger, Otterville; Henderson Chadwell, Ste. Genevieve; R. J. Willisms, Richmond; D. P. Bronaugh, St. Louis; George M. Jones, Springfield, and O. M. Bush, Clinton, at their meeting here to-day, decided to raise $10,000 for the monument to be erected in the Confederate cemetery at Springfield, Mo. The committee apportioned the cost of the committee apportioned the cost of the various counties in the state in accordance with their population of living ex-Confederates, and the belief was expressed that the money would be raised without difficulty. George M. Jones, president of the National Bank of Springfield, was selected as treasurer of the fund and his bond of $15,000 approved.

HINES OPPOSES NEW BILL. Says Proposed Amendments Would

Give Interstate Commerce Commission Radical Powers. Washington, April 8.-The interstate com merce committee resumed its hearings to-day on the bill amending the interstate commerce. Mr. Hines, assistant attorney for the Louisville & Nashville Raliros Company, was the first person heard. He controverted the position of Mr. Knapp that the bill did not extend the scope of the original act as understood at the time it went into effect.

He objected to the bill for the three reasons that it gives effect to the orders of the eons that it gives effect to the orders of the interstate commerce commission without any judicial decision; that it proposes to change the law as it applies to long and short hauls, and that it proposes to give the commission the power to fix rates, change classifications and prescribe rules for the regulation of the interstate commerce of the country. All these he considered radical modifications of the present law and he opposed them strengously. posed them strenuously.

SAYS SHE USED LOVE POTIONS

But W. E. Corwin Is Ordered to Pay Alimony and Counsel Fees to His Wife.

New York, April 8.-Walter E. Corwin supreme court, to pay his wife, Mary C. Corwin, $40 a month alimony and $75 counsel fee in an action she has brought against him for divorce. He is a cloak manufacturer, and his wife accuses him of undue attention to Miss Louisa Harris, one of his cloak models. He declares that when he ate at home he found that he became sick at the stomach, and on in-quiry he ascertained that his wife was con-sulting clairvoyants, on whose advice she put potions in his food to win back his love. Although he lived with his wife six months after this discovery, he says, he never ate at her house. Corwin is 65 years never ate at her house. Corwin is 65 years old, and married the plaintiff in 1867.
